THE AUSTRALIAN OFFICE FOR LEARNING AND TEACHING
SEED GRANTS INFORMATION SESSION

The Office for Learning and Teaching Seed Grant proposals have a closing date of Monday, 22 June 2015. This information session is a means by which ITaLI supports applicants to produce competitive proposals. Advice on the fundamentals of preparing a Seed Grant proposal, as well as all administrative issues, will be presented at this session.

Seed Grants, with funding up to $40,000, provide an opportunity to test the large-scale potential of learning and teaching innovation on a small scale. Seed Grants can be:

- pilot projects which test and evaluate an original idea including those that plan to build into full proposals
- single-institution, small scale projects
- projects to build the capacity of early career academics, including projects which are led by early career academics.

The information session will address the following questions:

1. Who can apply for these grants and what are the assessment criteria?
2. What are the timelines for this grant?
3. What does a competitive grant look like? Am I ready to apply?
4. How do I turn my teaching activity into a T&L project?

Examples of successful proposals will be discussed. Attendees’ questions will be invited.

Professor Peter Adams, Dr Mathew Hillier and Michele Wirt will facilitate the information session.
