Student feedback informs the understanding of teaching strengths and weaknesses and provides ideas about how courses and teaching can be improved. Survey results are also used for decisions regarding recruitment, continuing employment and promotion, and for decisions about courses, programs, and many aspects of curriculum and the student experience. Please only evaluate staff who have taught you.

Non-identifiable data collected from the UQ course and teaching survey instruments may be made available to staff for research purposes under Section 5.1.22 of the National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research.

Your responses to student evaluations are confidential. Individually identifiable data are not made available to academic staff. By agreeing to complete this SECaT evaluation, you agree to provide constructive feedback (positive or negative) which is intended to help improve the quality of teaching and learning at UQ. In doing so, you are also aware of your obligations as a UQ student.
